“As cat owners, it is your responsibility to protect them from any harm. Trustworthy vets emphasize that if you keep them indoors, you are keeping them out of unnecessary danger. So think about the hazards the outdoors present the next time you think of letting your cats roam outside.”

– Dr Max Spicer, Veterinarian

SAVE BIRD LIVES

Birds and wildlife are struggling to survive and you can help!

- The number of bird species at risk doubled between 2000 and 2017.
- One in three North American bird species is in need of urgent conservation action.
- Specific groups of birds (such as swallows) have declined as much as 60%.
- Over 100 bird species are vulnerable to cats because they nest or feed near the ground, including species at risk such as Piping Plover and Burrowing Owl as well as popular birds such as Cardinal and Goldfinch.

WHAT YOU CAN DO

- Keep your cat safe from the risks of roaming & keep birds and wildlife safer too!
- If your cat does catch a bird, don't assume the bird is okay: place it gently in a cardboard box with air holes and take it to a wildlife rehabilitation centre.
- If you want to let your cat outdoors, use a safe option such as a catio or leash-training.
- Make sure your cat can't contribute to the cat over-population problem: ensure they're spayed or neutered and have permanent ID.
- Advocate for safe cats and safe birds in your community.
- Plant native plants, trees and shrubs in your garden.
- Prevent bird-window collisions at home and at work.
